The Grand Southern Pleasure Grounds. [Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.] Of the many watering places that are scattered along the shores of the lower Potomac, the most beautiful and, by far, the most eligible for a summer's sport is that pefect little paradise know as "The Grand Southern Pleasure Grounds," situated between the river and Cognac Lake, in Westmoreland county, Va. This is the only resort on the Virginia shore of the Potomac, and it so far eclipses all competitors on the other shore that it may be said to stand without a rival south of Cape May. The proprietors of this place have de-parted from the regular routine of building a hotel and crowding their patrons into a space eight or ten feet square, but in lieu thereof they have erected a number of beautiful Japanese cottages, the appearance of which is to say the least unique in the extreme. These cottages are ranged up and down the beach at covenient distances from each other, and are both roomy and pleasant, each having its little plot of greensward, immediately in front, between the cottages and river, is a row of stately elems, beneath which are swung a dozen fine old Mexican hammocks, whose generous invitation to a mornings' nap or an afternoons' siesta, is so silently cloquent that it generally proves irresistible tides, where those lucky specimens of humanity who are able to snatch a short respite from the "realms of brick and martar" can sniff the summer zephyrs as they come wafting direct from the foamcrested waves of the Chesapeake. Boating, fishing, crabbing, and oystering can be enjoyed here to the fullest extent, and to those who are fond of equestrian sports, Le Grand Boulveard that extends en-where the fruits of every clime and the denizens of the briny deep vie with each other in tickling the palate of the epicure The bathing is unsurpassed on the Americal continent, and the visitor has the choice of bathing in the surf or in the quiet waters of the Lake where the majestic swan dips his snowy plumage. In the centre of this fine sheet of water is a group of little green isands that appear like a cluster of Emeralds set in the azure bosom of the lakelet. There are also several points of interest in this immediate vicinity. The birth-place of James Monroe is distant but a mile; that of Washington a little furtheron, "Colonial Beach" s also in close proximity to "The Grounds." and Mermaid Bower, near which Capt. Faunce a few seasons since succeeded in entangling one of those mystic maidens of the deep, in the meshes of his seine; but alas! e'er they could get her ashore she had extricated herself from the coils of treacherous twine, and, having passed on the cork-line to bid them a fond adieu she returned to her na-tive element a sadder if not wiser maiden. She was blessed with an unusual wealth of amber tresses and her eyes were of heavens' own blue. What a bonanza she would have been for Mr. Barnum! But the object that excites the greatest interest But the object that excites the greatest interest is a rock know as the "Devil's Seat." This rock, so tradition has it, was occupied by Monsieur Le Diable during a short visit to the outer world, and those of life's pilgrims who would form a slight idea of the country that lies beyond the stygian tides would do well to visit this spot and see what an impression his satanic majesty has left upon this rock and its surroundings. In fact the whole country hereabout is full of interesting scenes and historical reminiscences. The magnificent estuary upon which the grounds are situated, bears a striking resemblance to the bay of Naples, the lofty heights of Spy Hill in the background giving a very tolerable idea of Vesuvius

This is without a doubt the Elysian fields of the South, and can be visited daily on the palatial steamers "Mattano" and "Arrowsmith." Go and AUGUSTINE. A full line of Coxes' Childrens Shoes just
